If you enjoy using AqAdvisor.com, please spend few minutes of your time to complete this survey. This will help us out greatly!

This page is bookmarkable. If you want to come back to this aquarium setup quickly, you can bookmark this page with all tropical fishes and equipment selected. You can also post this link on other message boards to help communicate with others on your stocking plan.

Please do post AqAdvisor link on other forum sites. Many users have been asking if it is ok to post the link on other sites. This site has been built to share with others. More sites mean more feedback, hence more accurate results. Even non-English sites are ok - Google language works pretty well and users from more than 100 countries are already using it. We will do our best to collect as much feedback as we can from these sites.

Please leave feedback in the forum if you would like to see new species or aquarium filters currently not present in AqAdvisor.com.

To new tropical fish keepers: AqAdvisor.com is a tool/calculator that helps you determine your tropical fish stocking plans. It does not guarantee that the selected species will completely get along in the long run. We are making every efforts to identify potential problems and display them as warnings, but this takes time as knowledge database grows. Through weekly releases, accuracy will improve gradually. We highly recommend you to do further research, discuss results on your favorite aquarium forums and websites. Your favorite aquarium forums won't necessarily endorse or agree with the recommendations reported by AqAdvisor.com. Use AqAdvisor.com to get general stocking recommendations but do your own research BEFORE buying any species. We highly recommend that new tropical fish keepers understock (less than 100%) their aquarium tanks.
